HIS ENGINE DRAPED.

Spic and Span, No. 30 in Mourning for Engineer Dyner.

Mr. William Dyner, one of the Chesa-peake and Ohlo's faithful and popular enginemen, who had handled the throttle with success for twenty-three years, died on Thursday morning at his home, in on Thursday morning at his home, in this city, after a very brief illness. Mr. Typer was in charge of engine 25 that waits on the passenger, trains at Main Street Station. This engine is a type of the most improved switch engines—a six-wheeler, with 18 by 24 inch cylinders, and is "a poem in nickel and brass." Mr. Dyner was very fond of his protiy from steed, and took great pride to keep ber highly pollished. She always looks spic and span, as if "just out of the engine band-box," and invariably attracts attention as she gracefully and almost noiselessly glides about the modernly equipped train-sheds of the Main Street Station.

As soon as supermeaned J. W. Khalpp and Master Mechanie J. R. Gould learned of Mr. Dyner's sudden death, No. 30 was ordered taken out of service and draped in mourning pending the funeral obsequies of the deceased engineman. The in mourning, pending the funeral obsequies of the deceased engineman. The mourning engine appeared as almost a living thing in the gloom of grief as the stood, silent and steamless, under the train-shed yesterday, chad in her habilaments of aerrow, while officials and employes sadly viewed the vacant cab. The engine was towed down the track to the viaduet that crosses Broad Street, near the old Chesspeake and Onto Rahlway station, and stood just over the street while the funeral procession passed under the viaduet up Broad Street on the way to the city of the dead, the draped boil tolling a sad farewell to its fond master. It was a unique and a pretty memorial service, and touched the hearts of many people. It gave added evidence, too, of the bond of sympathy that links the hearts of railroad men—officials and employes.

An amendment to the ordinance relating to the building, repairing and adding to frame houses on Hull Street was passed. The amendment is stricter, laying down that no frame house shall be built, repaired or added to without first a diagram being drawn, showing the work to be done, and presented for the approval of the city engineer and the fire commissioners.

Mr. A. J. Daffron offered an amendment to the ordinance relating to the keeping up and maintaining cattle, swine, gouts, etc. The amendment was to the effect that no animal of the above description should be allowed to run at large on the streets.

There was a suff fight for the passage of the ordinance, until Mr. Bradley finally moved that a general election be called to determine the concensus of the people in regard to the prohibition of sows, etc., running at large on the streets, and that the Ordinance Committee be requested to draw up some plan whereby such election could be held.

Several of the players who were here the last time will return with the team, but there will be several new pitchers and the outfield has been strengthened by the addition of one or two men who have a reputation of being able to hit the ball when a run is needed badly. The team plays here on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week with Anthony's aggregation of Brownies. Trial Yesterday.

John Boyden, who appeared yesterday before 'Squire Cheatham on the charge of stealing some jewelry from some ladies in Forest Hill Park, was honorably acquilted. It is said that he shad confessed to the stealing merely as a joke, and was not even present in Forest Hill Park when the theft occurred. George Minns, colored, who was shot in the log by Polceman Rodgers while trying to resist arrest in Barton Heights, was sent on to the grand jury under a bond of $250 to be of good behavior for one year. Minms was willing enough to marry Hazel Burton, the complainant, but Mayor Maurice deeded the case should go before the grand jury.

For some time the feeling of the natives has been that the administration was deviating from the McKinley policy, and, as a result, there has been a noticeable disaffection among politicians with the insular government and also much unrest.

This attitude i was met fearlessly by Secretary Taft, who upheld the administration policy. When he finished his address he was loudly applauded.

Secretary Taft said in part:

NORFOLK, VA., August II.—Lieutenant-Governor Jøseph E. Willard, delivered an admirable speech to a large audience in the Granby Theatre tonight. There were many ladies present, and the stage was occupied by prominent citizens as vice-presidents. Mr. Willard dovoted himself to answering the charges against him. He said he was not a Virginian by the accident of birth, but a Virginian by deliberate choice. A man has no control over the place of his birth, but he can determine where he should live. He said Virginia is his choice of all of the States of the Union. He declared his attitude on the liquor question that of legislation for restraint and not for prohibition. He would enforce all of the laws on the statute books impartially and without reference to his private convictions, because it is his duty as a good citizen.

He declared in favor of pension laws for the support of the voterans of the wars as the best monuments which could be built to inspire respect for the heroes of former conflicts and to encourage the youth of the land to glorious deeds of heroism hereafter. His statements of his position toward the pensions and as to the allower questions excited a great deal position toward the pensions and as to the liquor questions excited a great deal of applause.

He said that every dollar of the money expended in advortising his campaign is his money. He inherited it, but it was made honestly, and not a penny of it represented the tear of a widow or the wall of an orphan. The real test is how a man got his money, and what he does with it. Not a dollar of his money was spent in violation of the law, moral or legal.

He said he had made a clean campaign, and he had a clear conscience.

A newspaper had referred to him as the administrator de bonis non of Carrie Nation. He did not care anything about carry Virginia.

The only reason Swanson and Willard gave for their candidacy was that he was ambitious to be Governor of Virginia. There was not a man in the audience who did not have an ambition to be Governor. He strongly advocated an improvement in the public school system. In the last Legislature he introduced a bill to establish a high school in each district and appropriating $500 to each school which had been established, and the bill would be passed at the next session of the Legislature.

He favored better roads, and opposed the working of convicts in opposition to honest laor. In 1996 there would be nearly a million increase in the revenues of the State, and as he expected to be the next Governor of the State he would tell them how it would be expended. He was certain of carrying four $\frac{1}{2}$ of the ten districts of the State, and his nomination was certain. He not only favored the Jim Crow bill as it was, but also its application to street railways. TAGGART TELLS

Testifies As to Various Improper

Acts On Part of His Wife.

(By Associated Press.)

WOOSTER, O., August II.—In the Tagart divorce case to-day, Judge Eason, citing authority of the Ohio Supreme Court, ruled out Lee testimony of Detestives Mabee and Morris, by whom the plaintiff expected to show misbehavior on Mrs. Taggart's part. The ground was that the young man in question, son of a Wooster elergyman, had not been named in the pleadings.

On resuming his testimony, the captain referred to the Matanzas champagne supper. The next morning, he said, he told his wife it would be better to send one of her visiting woman, friends home to her husband if that was the kind of parties they expected to have. This woman left next day, Mrs. Taggart had not commented on the episode, though witness had told her it was most disgraceful and expressed a hope that no one would find it out.

It out.

Captain Taggart then testified as to various improper acts on the part of his wife, named various co-respondents, and described his unsuccessful attempts to keep her away from them.

"Since quitting coffee I am hearty and well at sixty-three, and go to my work every day and feel stronger and better in every way than I used to when I was considerably younger.

"I am a mechanic and have been a freat lover of coffee and used it all my life until a few months ago, when I made up my mind that it was hurting me. I suffered from constitution, indigestion and kidney troubles, and I used to bloat up and have pains in my back.

"Something had to be done, and I quit coffee—the old kind, I mean—and began to use Postum Food Coffee. In a few weeks I was a well man again. My bowlet be became regular, my food digested comfortably, the bloating and pains in my back no longer troubled me, and my kidneys resumed healthy, normal action. That improved condition remains. I am a sure I owe it to Postum Coffee, for I have used no medicines.

"I like Postum much better than the old kind, It seems to me more satisfying and I and my whole family drink it morning, noon and night. This is my honest statement of what Postum has
